LETTER FROM MISSIONARY IN CHINA

Brother of Rev. G. H. Ewing Tells of Uprising, Its Cause and Progress-Chinese Seem to Favor Revolutionists.

disseminating its anti-Manchu doctrine, waiting only for a favorable time to put its campaign into effect.

Aside from that continual propaganda, there is little evidence of any special preparation for an outbreak at the present time. This has been brought about rather by the concurrence of several causes that have served to irritate the people, especially in central China, where as a matter of fact you know that the disturbance has begun.

Start of Trouble. Start of Trouble.

iritate the people, especially in central China, where as a matter of fact you know that the disturbance has begun.

It may be that you are already quite may be that you are already quite matter even before we here thought that it might amount to as much as now seems files! One of these causes was evident especially in an area and she in popp, the largest of the provinces of China; but as this had much to do with the remise of the provinces of China; but as this had much to do with the railway policy of the central government, it affect the provinces of China; but as this had much to do with the railway policy of the central government, it affect the provinces of China; but as this had much to do with the railway policy of the central government, it affect the provinces of China; but as this had much to do with the railway policy of the central government, it affect the provinces of the central government, it affect that was negatively and observed the central government in the fact of the case in the province of the central government in the fact of the case may precedents to lead to the province of the internal central government in the fact of the case in the province of the internal central central imperial edict; but within a few days the government was obliged, as a direct result of this commended act, to dismiss him from office with severe blame for not controlling affairs in his province. This attitude of the government is nothing new; in 1990, several men at different times had to occupy the position of scapegoat for the folly in cas; of an emergency. You may think me an enthusiast for Tientsin; but I do not know of any other commissioner Sheng, of whom I have already written, has been dismissed as being the cause of all the present turnmell, when promobly he was only too efficient a servant of the government. It was the action of the Hupen vice-troy in executing the rebellions soldiers that finally led to the immediate outbreak at Wuchang, the capital of the province and in this outbreak the leaders were of the revolutionary particle. waters of the revolutionary party, while much of their strength come from the readiness of the army to follow their lead. Accordingly, while there not been such special preparation been had it not been precipitated by circumstances as they arose, and while there is no evidence of any particularly strong leadership, the revolutionist and everything going their way. Attitude of People.

The feature which makes such a condition possible is the attitude of the People toward the Manchu rulers. It must be understood that the Chinese are subjects of an alien race, not citizers under a government of their own; for the Manchus while sprays from the for the Manchus while spring from the same original stock, were as much a different face as would be two different pace as would be two different paces, as would be two different popples of Europe from each other. Moreover, the Chinese people, as is now better known than before recent authoritains utterances of men who authoritative utterances of men who have known them well are essentially of a democratic spirit and temper; they are not averse to having other ople do the actual work of running people do the actual work of running the government; but they are quite institut that affairs that concern them shall be dene in a way that commends fielf to them. So lone as the Manchus conducted the government to the pleasing of the intelligent among the people there was less objection. But as the people have come to be better and more widely informed on governmental affairs, and as they have begun to have

Magical Effect of

New Face Peeler

To maintain a clear, rosy and youth-complexion, there's nothing so mple to use and yet so effective as party mercolized wax, which you get at any drug-store. Just apply unt at night as you would cold at only don't rub it in. In the play wash it out with warm water. but we never tried it you can't imthe magical effect of this harmhome treatment. The mercolide to wax causes the old worn-out f skin to come off in minute para. little at a time, and soon you entirely shed the offensive cuticle. fresh roung underskin now in evitice is so healthy and girlish looking, free from any appearance of attisality, you wonder why-you had not and of this marvelous complexionewing secret long ago.

The following interesting letter on the Uninese situation has been receivation. Rev. Charles E. Ewing, who is wither of Rev. George H. Ewing Norwich Town, and who has been receivable of the company of the people, while the imperial government is never strong in anything better than the machinations of political scheming. The revolutions have been quietly busy for me rears. Their first noticeable appoint that time there was quite a stiff in the part of the empire; it was reported that the revolutionists were commizing everywhere, and at the time when the educational commission was about to start for America bombthrowing at the Peking rallway station was autributed to them. On that account care has since been taken to guard against any similar outbreak in this section of China, and very little has been secretly organizing and disseminaling its anti-Manchu doctrine, waiting only for a favorable time to put its campaign into effect. the government is nearer at hand and is power more in evidence than fur-ther from Peking, while the whole idea of a favored race supported by the of a favored race supported by the laxes of the Chinese as a subject race is always highly distasteful to the peo-ple, there are no particular signs of

Feeling Against Government,

Feeling Against Government.

But in the southern part of the country, and I judge also in the western and central parts, the anti-Manchu feeling is, and probably always has been, one that rose to the height of cordial hatred. It is this fact that has made the populace of most of the empire ready at any favorable time to fall in with any movement that gave promise of putting an end to the present dynasty. Heretofore, the government has always been able to put in their power to protect foreigners, so great is the contrast between the present mevement and that of 1960. But there are cartain places where fighting is very likely to take place. Evidently the Chinese think that Peking S such a place, as all the extract ing is very hilely to take place. Evidently the Chinese think that Peking S such a place, as all the express trains from there to Tientsin are crowded with people, many of them of the highest class, who are deeming it wise to get away. Some of these will go on beyond Tientsin; but so many of them are planning to remain in Tientsin that even now all houses that are for rent are taken and all inns crowded, while many are left benind at Peking, unable to get a place on each train as it leaves. About two weeks ago it was reported in one of the Tientsin daily papers that the little emperor had taken refuge in Tientsin, but thi is generally regarded as a take, but I am now told that it is very generally believed by people in the foreign concessions that the emperor is according to the limest houses in the British concession, a nouse that was litted up several veries ago for official use for parties in Peking, which some thought meant the imperial family in case they might wish to use it.
